ABOUT ANDREW

Andrew Sharos has spent his career at the same Leyden high school where he started — the school named the College Board's AP District of the Year. When he took over the AP program, the class average was 1.9. Three years later it was 4.45 with a 100% pass rate, back-to-back — the highest scores in Illinois. The strategy wasn't test prep. It was culture, expectations, and rituals that compound.

Through three books and Village Project Consulting, Andrew now shares that work with schools across the country — from single PD days to multi-year partnerships. Every framework he teaches was tried with his own students first.
